Hardisty Energy Terminal Limited Partnership awards Worley a services contract

Worley has been awarded a contract by Hardisty Energy Terminal Limited Partnership, a joint venture between Gibson Energy Inc. and U.S. Development Group, for services at the Hardisty terminal in Alberta, Canada.

Under the contract, Worley will provide engineering, procurement, fabrication and construction services for a new diluent recovery unit (DRU) that has 8 million litres (50,000 barrels) per day inlet capacity, with the ability to scale to approximately 16 million litres (100,000 barrels) per day inlet capacity. The DRU will enable product from the Gibson Hardisty terminal to access new energy markets in the United States and Canada through rail transportation. The contract follows Worley's successful completion of the front-end engineering and design services for the DRU.

Worley's Cord team will provide fabrication and module assembly at the Edmonton yard before completing the construction at the Hardisty terminal. Engineering support services will be provided from Worley's Calgary office.

"We are pleased that the Hardisty Energy Terminal Limited Partnership has engaged Worley for their new diluent recovery unit. As an Australian company operating globally, we look forward to supporting the partnership access new energy markets," said Chris Ashton, Chief Executive Officer of Worley.
