May 2, 2013: Brisbane, Australia: Data#3 Limited (ASX:DTL), one of Australia's leading Information and Communications Technology companies, today announced its success in being reappointed as a panel supplier of Computer Hardware and Services to the Queensland Government.

Data#3 has supplied products and services to the Queensland Government under various panel contracts for the past twenty years, the last six years under the previous QP-707 panel contract. The new agreement is for three years, with the option to extend for a further two years.

The company will be one of a select number of suppliers on the new panel contract, with Data#3 being the exclusive supplier of HP equipment.

In an environment which the company continues to see as uncertain in both private and public sectors, Data#3 Managing Director, John Grant, said that the company was delighted to have been selected for the new contract which will help sustain its current business and provide opportunity for growth in the future.

"It's a great result. The Queensland Government's decision to reappoint Data#3 recognises the benefits derived from our previous agreements. We have been a long-term supplier to many Queensland Government agencies, and have invested significantly to ensure the product, services and procurement solutions we provide align with the flexibility and adaptability the Queensland Government needs to achieve its objectives.

"The opportunity to be the exclusive HP supplier under this new agreement recognises our position as HP's largest national partner and our long-standing relationship dating back to 1984. By combining HP's global strengths with Data#3's local expertise, we are confident that we can provide the Queensland Government with the best value for money and industry-leading service levels," Grant concluded.
